U101 2.0 out of 5 stars I still find it very low or not loud enough to fill my room. Maybe I needed something way better than this. Can't return either since some reviews states we can't return. If you are a type of person who wanted more bass don't get this. Maybe much better to go to a brick store and try something or at least try this on there. I made a mistake, no need to follow mine. They went small on the speakers but the base could double as an end table. It's HUGE yet doesn't produce the base you would expect. You have to use their speaker connections and their rear wires are only 50ft which won't allow for hiding them as needed. SHAME ON AMAZON for suggesting you purchase THEIR name brand 100ft of speaker wire which is useless. They also don't instruct you that you have to have a receiver to make it work. I'll be packing this crap and returning it tomorrow. But I tried the less expensive Vonhaus wall mount 4 pack brackets there is even a 5 pack which I missed coupled with 3M extreme dual lock fasteners. Each satellite speaker only weighs less than 2 lbs and Vonhaus mount is rated at 7 lbs. 3M dual lock is rated at 10 lbs and the adhesive is very strong. So far after a week the mounted speakers are all still holding up and there is no loss of adhesion. Will update review in a few months on how it is still holding up. But I think it would hold up since I used already these dual lock fasteners when I wall mounted some picture paintings around 23 lbs each 4 years ago and it is still holding up till now. It is not replaceable. The module from this system works reasonably well with the 15 series satellites.

The 10, which is twice as much money, module would probably work better in my room but this actually sounds quite good. I would rather have a 15 module but that's not possible so I'm happy. Honestly though I almost bought a Klipsch system and if it did not require taking my living room apart, about 3 days work, that's probably what I would have done. Consequently, the sub needs to be near the amp, otherwise you will have wires everywhere. Seems Bose could make an optional speaker connection crossover box that would fit behind the stereo console, feed all the speakers, and would Bluetooth to the subwoofer. Just a thought. It shows the wire holes being in the middle of the back of the speaker but the actual speakers have the hole towards the bottom of the back side. Bose only makes two kinds of brackets which have the wire hole either near the center or top of the back side which forces the speaker wires to bend at 90 degrees at the connector. They have made a speaker system that can ONLY be mounted using Bose mounts and have managed to not create a mount for this system. Bose support will also not be helpful and will send you mounts that do not match these speakers. Not a single one of the mounts that are suggested both on Amazon and the Bose site will match these speakers. I replaced an older Panasonic system and did not notice any grand Bose improvement. My room size is about a 15x15 with 10 ft ceilings. I did have trouble with one speaker cube, it quit for some unknown reason a year after I received them. I contacted Bose USA and even though it was out of warranty they replaced the speaker at no charge. Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again. Sorry, we failed to record your vote. The four satellite speakers and one center channel speaker are cube shaped and are only 3 inches tall, so its user can easily position these Bose surround speakers around a room. These 5.

1 channel surround speakers feature one powered subwoofer that has downward firing drivers, making for clean and floorshaking bass. With its optional SL2 wireless surround link, a user can set up the Bose Acoustimass 6 Series II system without the hassle of running wires. The satellite speakers can handle between 10 watts and 150 watts, and the subwoofer has its own power source, which makes finding a suitable amplifier to connect these Bose surround speakers simple. Rubber pads on the base of these 5.1 channel surround speakers keep them from sliding around when they are on even a slick surface. With their compact size and wide range of acceptable wattage, the Bose Acoustimass 6 Series II may be a good option for a new surround sound system. I even got the wiring and directions for hooking them up. You exceeded my expectations. They ought to sound good with my Bose 501 floor speakers. Verisign. I have no interest in huge towering speakers taking over my living room, and would much rather be able to hide my speakers behind something light like a curtain or the TV and have the sound come from seemingly nowhere, which I was able to achieve with these and also scare a few of my guests when they came over to watch movies since they thought I was still using my dull TV speakers. Setup is easy the sattelite speakers are identical so any one speaker can go anywhere, all you have to do is connect the correct cables to the speaker in the right location. The cables then connect directly to the subwoofer, and the subwoofer has a long dongle that connects to your receiver which is not included. Everything is labelled well and color coded, so its extremely difficult to connect incorrectly. The cables feel heavy and like they are made well, and the speakers even have some heft to them but the subwoofer is surprisingly light. The cables are also extremely long so you should be able to run them anywhere. Each speaker comes with rubber mounts to prevent them from moving if on a vibrationprone surface, and because each speaker is identical if one dies its easy to contact Bose and send one back for replacement although Ive had 2.1 Bose speakers for years and they still work like new so Im not that worried about them dying. When it comes to the sound I already knew what to expect, but I was still blown away with how much more oomph was given to them compared to my TV speakers. The small speakers even seem to get some bass in them as I found when I turned the subwoofer down as low as it would go, and everything is extremely clear. Being able to hide these pretty much anywhere is a huge plus, the only real speaker I have visible is the subwoofer but being black and sleek it doesn't look obnoxious. They can be pretty loud with zero distortion to the point of shaking my walls and being ear drum splitting so I don't have any idea how loud they can really go.

While I don't have many other speakers to compare these to since this is the first 5.1 set I've used in over 10 years since I bought an old Logitech system, I will say if you want small speakers that sound good then these Bose are the ones to get. Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again Bose has a customer for life now. Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again Wires are color coded and it is almost impossible to make a mistake. However, what disappointed me the most was the subwoofer. I have 2 Kilpsch subwoofers that shake the room. This one is barely audible up front and close. You have to put your hand on the subwoofer to hear a light vibration. But the size is almost as big as my two other Kilpsch SWs. This was for a family room where I could not position any large speakers, it is a very asymmetric room. Yet they are connected to a Samsung 48 in 4K curved TV. We have to make do, I guess. Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again These were bought to replace the Infinity speakers I had to leave in my house when I sold it. I could not be happier with the change to these speakers and I LOVED my Infinitys. I really do not get the hate for Bose that people have. I'm sure I don't have the perfect ear for sound and everything but these sound amazing to me. I have had people comment the same when I've had guests over whether it be for music or just the surround sound. If you can get them at the price I did, do not hesitate to jump on it. Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again The speakers sound great, but they come with RCA connections from the subwoofer to a Bose proprietary two prong plug on the speaker cubes. This will connect the subwoofer to your home theater input ports. You'll also need wall mounts or stands. Both the adapter and the connectors say that work with 14 gauge wire, but it is a really tight fit. But they sound great. Sorry, we failed to record your vote.
